PUBLISHER'S FOREWORD

WE take pride in presenting to you this Ninety-fourth edition of the THACKER'S INDIAN DIRECTORY OF INDIA, BURMA, CEYLON, PAKISTAN AND THE WORLD-richer and fuller than ever.

The improvements on the last issue have been continued. The "WORLD TRADE" Section has been further edited and therefore this issue contains more important Classified Trades and Professions of the World.

Attention has been directed towards further improvement of the Classified List of Trades and Professions in Calcutta, Bombay, Delhi, Madras and the Mofussil as we realize its great value to our subscribers. Strict observance of the States Re-organization Act, 1956 has been maintained in compiling the States of India Official Section. We have taken equal care in compiling our Burma, Ceylon and Pakistan Section and we hope the improvements will please our patrons.

So, this Mth edition is fuller and richer than ever. Nevertheless, we owe our anoiotries to its admirers for our delay in bringing it out and so keenin«* them waiting. Our only consolation is that we could not help the delnv. The different kinds of paper of this issue will mostly explain the cause. Our usual supply string of its particular Brand of Paper suddenly snapped off. In our vain effort to keep up the standard of paper we wasted rather too much time. When at last we decided to be on time with the issue rather than maintain the standard of paper, we were already too late. However that may be, we offer our unqualified apologies to our readers all the world over for this delay.

The circulation of this issue is expected to surpass all previous record. We have also booked quite considerable a number of orders from foreign countries. Enquiries are pouring in almost dally. These orders and enquiries effectively prove that this Directory to-day has been more firmly established in its right place as the leadin? Book of Reference of Tndia. Tts ponularity abroad can be estimated by its being represented in the Graphic 57, Exhibition of International Arts and Crafts, held at Laussane, organised hv Librairie Payot and also in Tokyo International Book Exhibition held in Tokyo in January this war.

We are sorry that we have been unable to incorporate some recent changes in the Central and State Governments of Pakistan as well as Central and State Governments of India due partly to late receipt and partly to non-receipt of informations from respective quarters in time.

The greatest care is being exercised in compilation so as to get the publication out within the professed year and a large staff is at work all the year round. We expect still hotter results in our next issue. Our staff takes particular care to avoid mistakes. But still mistakes may occur. In so large a book they are almost unavoidable. We also take (his opportunity of stating that we cannot accept any responsibilities where informations are tendered to us and accepted in good faith and published as genuine.

To advertisers in general and advertisers from foreign countries in particular, we would point out that "Thacker's Indian Directory of India, Burma, Ceylon, Pakistan and the World" is recognised as an indispensable book of reference in almost every office in India and offices abroad, who are interested in Indian Trades and Affairs. It is in constant use throughout the year and affords a permanent means of bringing advertisements continuously before the public. The London agents of Thacker's Directories are Messrs. Baptist Smith, Keith, Slater Ltd., Napier House, 24/27, High Holborn, London, W.C.1, where copies may be obtained, advertisement space may be booked and informations on all subjects connected with the Directory is always available.

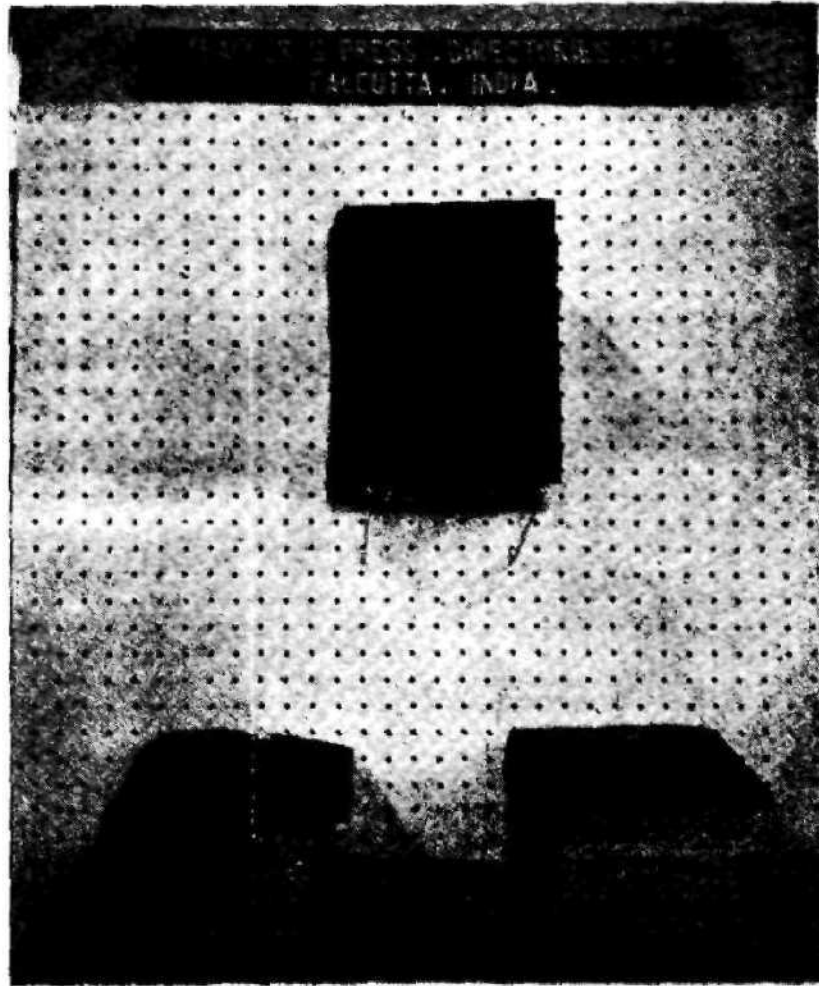

We offer our heartfelt thanks to Government Departments, Business Houses, Industrial Concerns and General Public for their kind, valuable and sincere co-operation and courteous response to our requests.

The Title and contents of Thacker's Indian Directory of India,^ Burma, Ceylon, Pakistan and the World are fully protected by copyright and all informations supplied by the General Public, Business Houses, and Government Departments are regarded as bonafide.

The Challenge of PROGRESS

Designed to carry the country towards the goal of a socialist pattern of society, the Second Five Year Plan is the embodiment of the hopes and aspirations of the nation. It stands for rapid development of basic and heavy industries, a great advance in food and agricultural production, a further increase in national income, expansion of employment opportunities and a more even distribution of economic power and the rewards of labour and enterprise. The problems that it poses are only the pangs of progress. It is a challenge that the nation can and must meet by rallying to the cause of the Plan and striving for its fulfilment in a spirit of dedication, service and sacrifice.

ON WITH THE PLAN

FOR PROGRESS, FOR PROSPERITY

"The remaking of our country is a great theme and we are engaged in a tremendous task which requires not only united effort but united effort with enthusiasm and without crowding itself"

-Jawahar Lal Nehru-

THE INDIAN CONSTITUTION

A STUDY

On the 26th of January 1950 India became a Sovereign Democratic Republic. The word "Sovereign" signifies that within her own sphere she has absolute power and is not subject to any external control. By "Republic" is meant she is no longer under monarchical rule. A Republic may or may not be democratic, but India decided to be a "Democratic," i.e., to be ruled by the representatives of the people.

On the day she emerged as a Sovereign Democratic Republic a written Constitution was framed which became the supreme law of the land.

A Constitution is the internal governmental machinery of a country. In structure the Indian Constitution follows the federal pattern of the Government of India Act 1935. Democratic in form its policy is the establishment of a socialistic order of society. Its most prominent feature is the Supremacy of the Executive.

SPECIAL FEATURES

The special features of the Constitution are—the disappearance of Princely India, sovereignty of the people, adult suffrage, joint electorates, the abolition of Privy Council jurisdiction and the substitution of that of the Supreme Court, the abolition of titles and untouchability, civil equality, irrespective of religion, enumeration of fundamental rights, directive principles of State policy, greater centralization, and the creation of a President and the cabinet system of government.

The Constitution fully bears out the assertion of the leaders that India is a Secular State, not only is there no State religion, but no privilege is given to any religion, and in respect of civil rights and obligations, no discrimination is made on the ground of religion. Subject to public order, morality and health, all persons are equally entitled to freedom of conscience and the right freely to profess, practice and propagate any religion. Every denomination is free to establish and maintain its own religious and charitable institutions and to provide religious instructions in schools. In short, complete religious toleration is the policy of the Constitution. There is no ecclesiastical department in the Government.

A separate chapter in the Constitution enumerates Fundamental Rights, corresponding to the Bill of Rights in the American Constitution. They are grouped under four heads—rights of equality; rights relating to religion; cultural and educational rights; and rights to property. Many of these rights were already to be found scattered over the ordinary laws of the land, some are new, the former category includes habeas corpus; freedom of speech; association and movement; freedom to reside in any part of India; freedom to own property and to carry on any legitimate occupation or trade. The latter category includes equality of opportunity in matters of public employment and abolition of untouchability and of titles. Apart from rights, such as mentioned above, which are available to citizens, there are some broader rights available to citizens and aliens alike, they may be called human rights and include protection of life and personal liberty and equality before law.

An interesting chapter in the Constitution is headed "Directive Principles of State Policy." The provisions in this chapter are not enforceable by any court, but the principles laid down are considered to be fundamental to the governance of the country. They deal with economic policies and social services conducive to the establishment of a socialistic order of society. The State is enjoined to direct its policy to secure adequate means of livelihood for the citizens; equitable distribution of material resources; prevention of concentration of wealth and means of production to the common cause; equal pay for equal work for both men and women; health and strength of workers; prevention of employment in unsuitable avocations; protection of children against exploitation; organization of village panchayats; right to work, to education and to public assistance in cases of unemployment, old age, sickness and disablement and in other case of undeserved want; humane conditions of work and maternity relief; a living wage, decent standard of life and full enjoyment of leisure and social and cultural opportunities; promotion of cottage industries; a uniform civil code for citizens; free and compulsory education up to the age of fourteen; promotion of educational and economic interests of the weaker sections of the people and their protection from social injustice and all forms of exploitation; raising the level of nutrition and the standard of living; improvement of public health; prohibition of the consumption, except for medicinal purposes, of intoxicating drinks and drugs; organization of agriculture and animal husbandry; protection of milch cows; protection of ancient monuments; separation of executive and judicial functions; and lastly, promotion of international peace and settlement of international disputes by arbitration.

Coming to sober realities the Constitution has tackled the problem of Minorities with wisdom and courage. The importance of the protection of Minorities is universally recognized in all civilized countries. It is necessary to secure to members of a racial, religious or linguistic minority just and fair conditions of life for two reasons; First, to prevent grievances which may lead to disorder in society; secondly, to win confidence so as to weld all communities into a united nation. Apart from express general provisions prohibiting discrimination on grounds of religions, caste or race and securing equality before law and equal opportunity in matters of public employment and also securing freedom of religion under fundamental rights, special provisions have been made for the Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribes and the Anglo-Indian community.

India Official

These relate to reservation of seats in the legislatures, to appointments in services and to educational grants.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGE

The official language of the Indian Union will be Hindi in Devanagari script and the form of numerals will be the international form. English, however, will continue to be used for official purposes for fifteen years. Subject to this, a State may adopt a regional language for internal use. The language of the Supreme Court and the High Courts, and of Act Regulations Rules, Orders, etc., will be English.

The Union of India is divided into fourteen States (of which some are newly formed under States Reorganization Act), and Centrally administered territories which are widely scattered. The States are the units of the Union and each have its own executive, judiciary and legislature. The constitutional structure of these branches generally follows the pattern of the Government of India Act, 1935. Governors will be appointed by the President.

One of the most important changes in the Constitution is the abolition of separate electorates and the substitution of joint territorial electorates.

THE PRESIDENT

Under the Constitution, the President is the head of the executive and the Supreme Commander of the Defence Forces of the Union. He is elected by an electoral college consisting of the elected members of both Houses of Parliament and of the Legislative Assemblies of the State*. He will hold office for five years and will be eligible for re-election. Voters in India will have no share in his election, as voters in America have. There is a greater similarity between India and France in the matter not only of election but also the exercise of powers by the President. He is a Constitutional head and is not expected to govern. In the French Constitution it is expressly laid down that the President shall exercise his powers on the advice of responsible Ministers. The Indian Constitution does not say so in explicit terms, but the Council of Ministers (which is the Indian Cabinet) is enjoined "to aid and advise the President in the exercise of his functions".

Is he bound to accept the advice? In the previous Indian Constitutions, there was either express provision, as in 1919, or an injunction in the Instrument of Instruction, as in 1935. The lacuna may well be filled by convention, as in England. The functions of the President are more or less the same as those of the Governor-General in the late regime. He summons, prorogues and dissolves Parliament; he appoints all the higher officials; he grants pardon; he assents to Bills, proclaims emergencies and promulgates Ordinances. He is not responsible to Parliament, but can be impeached by either House for violation of the Constitution.

There is a Vice-President under the Constitution. He is ex-officio Chairman of the Council of State*. He will be elected by the members of both the House of Parliament and will hold office for five years.

THE REAL RULERS

It is the Council of Ministers, with the Prime Minister at the head, who will be the real rulers of India. The Prime Minister will be appointed by the President and the other Ministers by the President on the advice of the Prime Minister. The Council of Ministers shall be collectively responsible to the House of the People, i.e., the lower House of Parliament. The Indian Constitution has adopted the British Parliamentary system in preference to the American Presidential system. The Prime Minister will probably be the leader of the majority party in the Parliament. The President will ask him to form the Council of Ministers who must all be members of Parliament; and on his advice the President will allocate portfolios. Policy will be determined by the Council of Ministers and Bills will be framed accordingly. As, normally, all the Ministers will be drawn from the majority party in Parliament, the Council of Ministers will naturally control legislative action. This is inevitable in any Parliamentary system of Government.

The Indian Parliament consists of the President and two Houses. The Council of States and the House of the People. The Council of States will have 12 nominated members and not more than 230 representatives of the States. The nominated members will represent literature, science, art and social service. The respective numbers of representatives of States are set out in the Schedules. The House of the People will be directly elected by voters in the States, on the basis of population, one member for every half to three-quarter lakhs of the population. The House of the People will have a life of five years. The Council of States will not be subject to dissolution but one-third of the members will retire every second year. The other provisions relating to Parliament are practically the same as in the 1935 Act and need no specific mention.

EXTENSION OF POWER

There is a judicious extension of the Union Government's legislative powers over matters which hitherto had been exclusively provincial. This has been done by including new items in the Concurrent List. For effective economic development of the country, and also for uniformity, a certain amount of centralization has been found to be necessary. For instance, price control, social insurance, unemployment, principles of compensation on compulsory acquisition of private property, adulteration of foodstuffs, joint family and partition are matters which the Union Centre may now take up for legislation and executive action.

Residuary power of legislation on unenumerated matters is now vested in the centre. Further, Parliament may legislate with respect to a matter in the State List, if the Council of State by a two-thirds majority passes a resolution declaring that it is expedient to do so in the national interest. Parliament will also have plenary power of legislation when the President proclaims an emergency. Thus it appears that the Union Cabinet may, if necessary, concentrate all unifying power in their own hands. Such concentration may also be useful in arresting rapidly growing separatist tendencies in the country.

The most important change in the judiciary is abolition of Privy Council jurisdiction and the establishment of a Supreme Court as the highest court of appeal. This Court will consist of a Chief Justice and seven other judges. Appointment will be made by the President, who is also the appointing authority of Judges of the State High Courts. The retiring age of a Supreme Court Judge is 65 years and of a High Court Judge 60 years. There are two interesting innovations. One is the power to co-opt a retired Judge to act temporarily as a Judge, and the other is the President's power to transfer a judge from one High Court to another. All the High Courts have been placed on an equal footing in the matter of issuing prerogative writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto and certiorari.

A prominent feature of the Constitution is limitation of the powers of the Courts with regard to legislation which may abridge fundamental rights. For instance, in matters of preventive detention and depriving a citizen of his property, the Courts will not be able to give any relief. The Executive is Paramount, the Judiciary is the Cinderella of the Constitution.

Some parts of the Constitution are cast in idealistic mould. Adult suffrage is one of them. In a democracy, government is supposed to be controlled by the general body of citizens. This postulates a certain minimum standard of mental development. The standard has yet to be reached. It cannot be claimed that the generality of the people have yet the capacity to exercise the franchise intelligently, that capacity will no doubt grow with the spread of education, to-day it is only an ideal.

DELHI, CAPITAL CITY

While she must concede seniority to— for example—Rome in point of antiquity, Delhi, nevertheless, stands very high amongst the capital cities of the world. For, from one or another of some fifteen places within the triangle formed by the Ridge and the Jumna, most, if not all of India, has been governed for a period not far short of a thousand years. Here Slave Sultans, Rajput Chieftains, Turkish, Afghan, Moghul, Maratha and British rulers all held their sway.

The earliest of Delhi's capitals, Indraprastha, can be seen only with the eye of faith, though persistent tradition has placed its site on the knoll where Humayun built his citadel, the Purana Qila. The oldest existing centre of Government is believed by some to be that which adjoins the mysterious water-amphitheatre of Suraj Kund, about a dozen miles south of New Delhi. Tradition has it that both the amphitheatre and the city were the work of Raja Anang Pal, a Rajput, who flourished in the eleventh century A.D. Little of the buildings of the ancient city can now be seen except the ruins of rubble walls. There are no signs of fortifications and no signs of craftsmanship save for a few crudely carved stone pillars of uncertain age.

LALKOT

When we come to the next capital we are on firmer ground, for substantial relics of it remain. This was Lai Kot, the headquarters of Prithvi Raj whose name was preserved by the Muslim conquerors who styled the city Qila Rai Pithora. Its massive walls may still be traced through most of their perimeter, and of the superb baroque carving of its temples many splendid examples have been preserved in the pillars of the mosque adjoining the Qutb Minar. After Prithvi Raj fell in action against the invaders, came the dynasty of Slave Kings. To them and their successors the Khilji Sultans' posterity owes the stupendous Qutb Minar, one of the wonders of the world, as well as the Quwwat-ul-Islam ("Might of Islam") mosque and other edifices which survive in whole or in part.

Of the next capital, Kilokhri, a few miles to the north-east of -Lai Kot, nothing is left for us to see; but the succeeding three—Siri, Tughlakabad and Jahanpanah, the 5th, 6th and 7th cities of Delhi—still yield impressive relics. Siri had perhaps grown up as a suburb of Lai Kot and dates from the thirteenth century, and the two were subsequently linked by the creation of Jahanpanah. Before this consolidation was effected, however, the Khilji rulers had given way to Ghiyasud-Din, first of the Tughlaks who, in his short reign of five years, constructed the colossal fortress-city of Tughlakabad, lying on a spur of the Ridge at the base of the Delhi triangle. As large as the city of London, its walls rise as high as 70 feet and the blocks of masonry which compose them sometimes weigh as much as six tons each. The whole stupendous tash is said to have only two years.

A TUGHLAK BUILDER

Ghiyasud-Din's eccentric son, Muhammad Bin Tughlak, was mainly responsible for Jahanpanah; but it was another of the line, Firoz Shah, who was the greatest Tughlak builder and next to Shah Jahan, the greatest builder of all Delhi's sovereigns. Of his city of Firozabad little remains save its badly ruined citadel, Kotla, Firoz Shah, but in all parts of the triangle are to be seen relics of his activities.

To his inspiration we owe the fine series of "Khan Jahan" mosques, a set of remarkable and almost unique octagonal tombs, the college and other buildings around Hauz Khas, the two Asoka pillars which he brought to Delhi as trophies and re-erected. Working in crude materials but on a majestic scale, the very profusion of his enterprises has secured the survival around Delhi of much that is significant. This remarkable man was administratively much ahead of his time. For example, the approved of the Finance Department was secured to estimates before a building was put in hand; and as a side-line he even seems to have run a bus service to the Qutb!

After the Tughlaks came the Lodi and then the Saiyyid dynasty. Their court was not continuously situated at Delhi and their empire was often governed from elsewhere, and the principal local evidence of these rulers is to be found in the fine tombs of a few of them, in and near the Lodi Gardens not far from Safdarjang and Delhi's internal airport. For the most part they continued and elaborated the architectural tendencies of the Tughlaks.

THE MOGHULS

The Moghuls had long been encroaching further and further into the lands of the Sultans of Delhi. They had penetrated as far as the capital over three centuries before their dynasty was able to establish itself on the Indian throne. Babar, first of the Moghul emperors, left little mark on Delhi. His successor, Humayun, was responsible for the Purana Qila, the lofty walls of which tower over the Irwin Stadium at the end of New Delhi's Central Vista. How much this capital—the 11th, for we have passed by Khizrabad and Mubarakabad Saiyyid creations of which little or nothing now exists—owes to Humayun and how much to Sher Shah Suri who ousted him from Delhi for some years is a point upon which the experts do not agree. It was in this fort that Humayun met his death by a fall on staircase, and not far to the southward stands the magnificent mausoleum in which he was interred, perhaps Delhi's most imposing structure.

The Moghul emperors had a special penchant for building. Akbar and Shah Jahan chose for the most part to exercise their talents at Agra and elsewhere rather than in Delhi; but it is to Shah Jahan that we owe the Red Fort, which has one of the most impressive exteriors in the world, a vast sandwich of red sandstone veneers enveloping a cement and rubble filling.

The main entrance into the Fort lies through the huge Lahore Gate and then along a high vaulted approach. The arcades are occupied by a number of fine little shops richly displaying art wares and curios. The Imperial Drum House or Naubatkhana, forming another gateway, leads to the Durbar Hall or Diwami-Am, to the west of which stands a splendid pavilion of red sandstone with a series of colonnades. Just behind this is seen the Hall of Private Audience or Diwani-Khas. It is a marble pavilion of superb beauty. The gems that shed light therein are no more, nor the majestic "Peacock Throne," but due to the restoration work initiated by the late Lord Curzon, some of the exquisite interior decorations are still preserved. During the Moghul days the ceiling of the pavilion was embossed with gold and silver foliage; it is now merely painted. Even then, what remains is enough to impress the visitor with the miracle of art that found expression in the regime of the Grand Moghuls.

It is fashionable to speak of the years after Aurangzeb as a sort of Moghul twilight, but some good stuff was produced despite the vicissitudes of the imperial house : delicate miniatures, pleasant buildings (e.g. the Sonehri Masjid just south of the Bed Fort), beautiful textiles and bijouterie. But on a rapid sweep there is little to catch the eye until we come to the New Delhi of Lutyens and Baker.

New Delhi, the Eepublic of India's 9,000 acre capital, now covers nearly threp times as much ground space and accommodates six times as many people as it was originally planned to do some 30 years ago.

The structures at New Delhi show a harmony of the architectural forms of India and Central Asia with those of Italy and England. The stately courtyards, the soaring domes, campaniles and screen or jalli works on marble, stately entrances and similar other oriental modes—so manifest in the Fort of Shah Jahan—are sought to be mingled with modern needs and concepts. The Secretariat Buildings, designed mostly by Sir Herbert Baker, are perhaps the largest state office in the world. They have nearly 1,000 rooms and eight miles of corridors. Speaking of these two Blocks, which were in his special charge, Sir Herbert Baker writes: "The principle which has prompted the design, as far as any principle in building is conscious, or can be put into words, has been to weave into the fabric of the more elemental and universal forms of architecture the thread of such Indian traditional shapes and features as may be compatible with the nature and use of the buildings." Government House shows even more of this blend of East and West, specially the great Durbar Hall under the great Dome of the Palace. The three buildings which stand on a platform 32 ft. above the level below spreads over 330 acres, with its mile and a half of corridors 340 rooms and 227 columns, 35 lobbies and 37 fountains, and looks much like the palace of the Popes on the plain of Avignon. The House of Parliament is a circular structure, recalling the memories of the Colosseum at Borne, with a continuous open colonnade, half a mile in circumference. And the collective impression of the whole view brings home to every mind the evolution of modern government in this ancient country.

The architects and engineers who prepared the blueprint of the seat of Government, on the banks of the Jumna, would have been amazed at the changes which war and partition brought about in the layout of what they had planned to be one of the most beautiful cities of Asia.

The growth and development of New Delhi, which has had to keep pace with the expansion of Governmental, machinery, also bears the marks of impact of political events that have occurred during its short history.

Delhi, which since the year 1193 A.D. has had two queens and some 70 kings, now sees its first republication regime. Fifty years ago its population was scarcely more than 200,000; more than seven times that number now acclaim the installation of their President.

VISVA-BHARATI UNIVERSITY

FOUNDED BY RABINDRANATH TAGORE IN 1921

Incorporated by Act of Parliament as a Central University in 1951

Address:—Santiniketan, West Bengal

Visva-Bharati is a residential, teaching University situated in the open country,—the University area occupying over 11 sq. miles. In addition to auricular work opportunities are available in the University for cultural, creative and constructive activities. Institutions and colleges are maintained for a complete education,—from the junior school stage through graduate courses to Post-Graduate Research. The medium of instruction is Bengali for the pre-matriculation stage and English for all other courses.

AMREU

Amreli, formerly a part of Baroda State is a new district in the northern division of the Bombay State. It lies inside the geographical limits of the Union of Saurashtra and is not one block of territory but is composed of a number of separate parts intersected by territory belonging to the Saurashtra Union. Area, 353 square miles. Population (1951), 317,203

The district is level country, broken only by the Gir Hills in the Dhari Taluk. The average annual rainfall is between 25 to 30 inches. About 95-4 per cent of the land is dependent wholly on rain water, while only 4.6 per cent is irrigated by water from wells and streams. The principal crops are bajri, j'awar, ground-nuts, cotton, wheat, gram, sugarcane, rice, sesamum and kalthi. Production of oil from ground-nut is one of the chief industries, while other industries include cotton ginning and the production of khadi

BARODA (Gujarat)

In the regrouping that followed the integration State formed the integration of the Baroda State with Bombay in May 1949. Baroda, one of the biggest states in India, consisted of five separate territorial blocks, three of these blocks lay in the northern part of Bombay and two in the State of Saurashtra. Baroda has now been reconstituted into three districts in Bombay known as Baroda, Mehsana and Amraoti with necessary territorial adjustments with the existing districts of Bombay and the merged areas. For instance the entire district of Navsari in the south has been merged with the Surat district

In the regrouping that followed the integration of the Baroda State with Bombay, the smaller States including Chhota-Udaipur and Bhadarwa and others lying in the tracts known as the Pand* Mewas and Sankheda Mewas were included in the newly formed Baroda district. Also the two talukas, Bhadrans and Petlad which formed part of the former Baroda State were away and included in the Kaira district

The new Baroda district forms a central compact block in the heart of Gujarat. It lies between North Lat 21° 41' and 22° 32'; East Long 73° and 74° 10'; bounded on the north by the Kaira district beyond the river Mahi and by Panchmahals on the North-East; on the east the district is bounded by Madhya Pradesh and on the south and west by Broach. It has a total area of 8,176 square miles. Population (1951). 1,194,746. Languages spoken:—Gujarati and Marathi

KUTCH

Formerly an Indian State in Western India, administered centrally under a Chief Commissioner, now merged in the State of Bombay under States Reorganisation Act, 1956. The new State lies in No Lot 22° 47' and 24°; East Long 68° 25' and 71° IV; and is bounded on the north and north-west by the Province of Sind in Pakistan; on the east and south by Saurashtra; on the south by Saurashtra and the Gulf of Kutch; and on the west by the Arabian Sea. Area, exclusive of the Rann of Kutch. 8,461 square miles. Revenue about Rs. 80 lakhs. Population (1951), 567,606. Languages spoken—Kutchi and Gujarati

There is a fair proportion of good arable soil in Kutch on which wheat and barley are cultivated, as well as cotton, the ordinary varieties of millet and pulse and a little garden produce. Kutch is accessible by boat, via Kutch-Mandvi, in fair season. There is a daily motor bus service between Mandvi and Bhuj all the year round. There is a daily boat service between Navlaki and Kundla Port. From Kundla Port to Bhuj by rail is 40 miles; there is also a motor bus service starting earlier than the train. There is a guest house and a good landing ground for aeroplanes at Bhuj where they stop for mails and passengers on scheduled days of the week and timings

NAGPUR

Formerly a district in the State of Madhya Pradesh, now merged in the state of Bombay under states Re-organisation Act, 1956, lying between North Lat 20° 35' and 21° 43'; East Long 78° 17' and 79° 44'; bounded on the north by Chhmdwara; on the east by Bhandara; on the south-east by Chanda; on the south-west by Wardha; and on the north-west by Amravati. The extreme length of the district from east to west is 84 miles and its extreme breadth from north 76 miles. Distance by rail, 759 miles from Calcutta, 812 from Allahabad, 160 from Jabalpur and 244 from Bhusawal Junction. Area, 3,843 square miles. Language spoken :—Uraam

The district for the greater part is undulating plain traversed by low hill ranges. These in some places are extremely picturesque and clothed with forest. The forests are mainly situated on the Satpura hills to the north-east with isolated patches on the hills extending along the south-western border. The forest growth varies with the nature of the soil. Teak is found on good, well-drained slopes, salai on steep hill-sides and ranges and satinwood on the sandy level. Mango, tamarind and date-palms are common in the open country

The Annual average rainfall is about 45 inches, but less is received in the west than in the east of the district. Cotton and jawar are the chief produce. The district is also famous for its oranges. In the matter of minerals the district is badly off. There are, however, some manganese mines and limestone quarries, There are textile mills in Nagpur City, a number of oil mills, a pottery concern, glass works, saw mills, a rubber factory, a large fruit canning industry and a number of handloom factories
